Job Information:

This is opinion research only, no selling is involved. The majority of our projects are to collect information from specific participants from our clients' programs/services. The positions offered are part-time, with flexible shifts, but are primarily available for evening and/or weekend work. These positions are ideal for retired/semi-retired persons wishing to work limited hours as well as post-secondary students seeking part-time work to supplement their income and to gain valuable experience in the social sciences field. Due to the nature of our work, fluctuations in the availability of hours may occur.

As a social research firm, the types of projects we work on include:

- university and/or college student outcomes surveys (how did respondents education or training prepare them for the future?);
- income assistance and/or job training program evaluations (did the assistance/program help respondent become employed?);
- labour market evaluations (what skills are required for industry?); and/or
- focus group studies (recruiting participants for various topics).

Typing (35+ wpm), computer familiarity and excellent verbal communication skills are essential. CATI or survey experience would be an asset. We would prefer applicants who are fluent in English and French, or have the ability to speak English fluently along with another language (e.g., German, Farsi, Spanish, Hindi, Punjabi, Cantonese, Mandarin, Vietnamese, Yiddish, etc.). While a second language is not required, it is definitely an asset.

While we thank all applicants, only those short-listed for interviewing will be contacted.
